

Heavenly Hello

So she showed up | wearing sandals
Supposedly for tea
When I asked her | to come in
She undressed in front of me

She said, "All the world's a plaything
"And you got inside my head.
"So I need you to love me
"Before our moment's dead."

I remembered | the letter
I mailed from inside of me
A greeting card | of questions
Seeking some sympathy

(So I said) "You loved me like a plaything
"Then I got inside your head.
"Well I need you to love me
"Before another moment's dead."

CHORUS It's the heavenly hello
Before the long goodbye
It's love at first sight
Before the jaded eye
Takes us away from here
And makes everything unclear
And question all of the things
We once wanted

The afternoon | was languid
And slowly soaked the heat
But she drove off | brokenhearted
Her dress lay in a heap

My days aren't like a movie
Where scenes are set in lies
I asked her to love me
There was no truth in her eyes

CHORUS It was the heavenly hello etc
